Subject: Appearance Ebola virus in West Africa

HIS EXCELLENCY,

As you may have noticed lately, the West Africa, through more than six months, feels a real psychosis with the emergence of Ebola virus in some of its member countries.

This disease, which virus was discovered in 1976, has recorded, according many experts, more than 1,000 deaths. The majority of these are paradoxically in the West African region, an area so far spared by the disease. Furthermore this region is characterized by significant progress in terms of integration, the presence on its soil of fundamentalist movements and culture oriented towards emigration.

Our firm GMCCONSEILS, www.gmcconseils.com, true to its pan-African convictions, has done much speculation about the relevance of the strong showing of such a virus in Africa, in a geopolitical context marked by a pronounced competition of International Powers in a continent considered by many experts as a potentially emerging region in the coming years.

The Ebola virus appears in an environment marked by an upsurge of violence consecutive to Arab Spring environment, the shortness of Western military interventions inside strategies against terrorism and by increasingly dramas in illegal emigration towards Europe. We mention that the virus was discovered in Guinea at a moment of full preparation of the Africa USA summit on which great hopes were placed by our Continent.

Today, the large international communication done around EBOLA has significantly tarnished the image of our continent in the world, with three potential geopolitical risks to manage in short-term: (i) a decline in tourism and a questioning of decision of Foreign Direct Investment which could reduce growth and bring several international experts to question the concept of a potentially emerging

Africa, (ii) a decline in sub regional integration policies (iii) a strengthening of western migration policies

The context in which the virus was discovered, the magnitude of observed deaths as well as the potential impact of the disease on the development of our continent, bring our firm to question the possible existence of a strategy of destabilization of our Continent.

Therefore, we have hereby ask kindly to you, as joint Organization of Humanity, to open an international investigation that could show potential external and internal responsibilities related to the introduction of Ebola in the West African .

Yours Faithfully

Monsieur Magaye GAYE
